Family businesses are unique; they require a strategy that differs from other firms. They have inimitable strengths, as well as problems that require a specific approach.

There's often additional emotional stress in family businesses, particularly with regard to pay and benefits, communication, managing conflict and inheritance issues.

However, family businesses offer a number of benefits that are hard to cultivate in other companies, such as greater trust between the team and a stronger commitment to the success of the business.

At our seminar we will focus on the tax aspects of running a family business and cover:

- Bringing in the next generation
- Rewarding family members in the most tax efficient way
- Tax traps to watch out for
- The tax aspects of planning for retirement

We will finish with some tax dos and don'ts to take back to share with your family.
